EDITORIAL

This is the first issue of the sixth volume of Czech Journal of Social Sciences, Business and Economics (CJSSBE) published in spring of 2017.

The main focus of our journal remains to be the facilitation of transmission of the new scholarly discoveries in the fields of social sciences, business and economics to the broader audience, both research community and the general public. Thence, CJSSBE offers a platform that supports scholars in building upon intellectual treasures and advancing our understanding about various fields of research in novel and meaningful ways. Capitalizing on this effort, we focus on furthering our scope and consolidating our position in both conceptual developments and practical applications in the fields covered by our scope and research interests.

There are five original research papers appearing in the first issue of 2017 that address a number of topics in the fields of social sciences, business and economics. We are proud to present a wide mix of authors from such countries as China, Columbia, Czech Republic, Poland, Russian Federation and Slovakia.

The first paper of the first issue elaborates upon a very timely and widely-discussed topic of Brexit, namely its economic implications with a special focus on the labor market and labor migration that will be effected by the first “European divorce” when the first ever EU Member State in the last 60 years of EU existence will leave the union leaving many doubts and unanswered questions.

The second paper focuses on the EU migration policy and seeks for the new pathways and directions of how it should be shaped up. A case study of Australian emigration policy is used as an example and a comparison.

The third paper is devoted to the program-target method of pricing for international educational services for international students at higher educational establishments.

The fourth paper is dealing with innovations and competitiveness in regional development using a unique cross-regional comparison and experience of Latin America, Europe, and China. Finally, the fifth paper discusses novel trends in e-tourism while focusing on using ICTs in the modern tourism industry. The paper discusses, among all, such new and exciting trends as virtual reality (VR) or augmented reality (AR) in attracting tourists to perspective tourism destinations.

We trust that you will enjoy reading this issue of CJSSBE and looking forward to presenting you our next issue that will be out in summer of 2017.
